

Speaking up for Health Group

This leaflet tells you about the Speaking up for Health Group.

The group will work with health services to make them better for people with learning disabilities.

We will work with these health services:

- Services for people with mental health problems and learning disabilities

- Community Health services like GPs (local doctors), dentists, community nurses

- Hospitals

- Ambulance services

Some of the things the group will do

Learn more about health services so that we understand how to make things better

Work with other self advocate groups to get their ideas about making health services better

Help to organise consultations about health like the Big Health Days

Talk to carers about their ideas

Help to make health information easier to understand

Check services are doing a good job

Some more things the group will do

Do training for staff

Write down good ideas for making health services better

Learn new skills, like how to interview people and signing.

Be involved in research projects

Be involved in choosing new staff

Tell people about our work
